Winter Construction Rises to One of Atlanta's Best Places to Work

(October 16, 2015) ATLANTA, GA - The Winter Construction Company has been named the 2nd Best Place to Work in the large employer category by the Atlanta Business Chronicle. 2015 is the second consecutive year that Winter Construction has been on the list, moving up from number 17 in the medium employer category the previous year. The Best Places to Work survey is conducted and published annually by the Atlanta Business Chronicle as a means to recognize the companies focused on creating a positive, effective work environment for their employees.

To find Atlanta's 2015 Best Places to Work, the weekly business newspaper asked readers to nominate workplaces in metro Atlanta. Quantum Workplace surveyed employees at participating companies and organizations from early July through mid-August. Quantum ranked the top 100 employers in four categories: the top five among extra large employers (500 employees and up), the top 20 among large employers (100 to 499 employees), the top 20 among medium employers (50 to 99 employees) and the top 55 among small employers (10 to 49 employees).

When asked by employees why Winter Construction has achieved such a high-ranking award, it was often said it is because of our CEO, Brent Reid. He leads by example and employees respect and appreciate it. "Thanks to our great people, clients, and partners, we have a culture that not only takes pride in what we do and doing it well, but also in having fun all the while. We truly believe in building good experiences, and our team is central to making it possible," says Reid.

Winter places a priority on its employees, providing opportunities at work and beyond to have fun and be healthy. Funstruction, a social gathering of Winter Construction employees, takes place on any given Friday. The team enjoys a variety of social activities, including Atlanta Braves games and bowling. On Fridays, Winter Construction offices close at 3:00pm so employees can enjoy an early start to the weekend. Winter also has a wellness initiative that is extremely successful, winning 2015 Healthiest Employer by the Atlanta Business Chronicle. The plan has helped the company save thousands of dollars on its insurance plan, with the savings going back to the employees via their 401(k) plan.
